Hi Jess,

How are you doing? I'm going to talk about my experience. Yesterday morning, a charity needed our help to sell flags, so my friend Emma and I headed to work and visited lots of crowded streets.

After selling almost 100 flags, Emma was starving, so we decided to eat fast food at a nearby McDonald's. Things were going well, and we felt like we were on top of the world. However, we didn't take care of our belongings, and that was when bad things started to happen.

Suddenly, we heard a "whoosh" sound. We discovered that our flag bags were gone! We were flabbergasted and panicking. After a while, we calmed down, and Emma called 911. While we were waiting, Emma said sadly, "We should have looked after our belongings. Nevertheless, the flag bags are gone!"

Finally, the police arrived and started searching for the flag bags. After 10 hours of non-stop searching, they still couldn't find them. They had no choice but to stop the search for obvious reasons. We explained everything to the charity's manager; however, he kicked us out and shouted, "DON'T YOU DARE COME BACK AGAIN!" It was, of course, a terrible experience. We've learned that we should be more aware of our belongings from now on.

How about you, Jess? How was your experience? Please tell me if you got one.

Best,
James

Hi Jess,

How's everything going?

Yesterday, Emma and I sold flags for the charity. People were willing to buy flags to help the charity, and Emma and I were happy that all the flags were sold. Later, we went to the fast food shop to have a delicious meal. We talked joyfully about the new comic book, The Rubik Master. We both thought the master was smart, like an owl.

When we tried to clean up the table, Emma discovered that the flag bags were gone; she screamed, "Our flag bags are gone! What should we do?" I was shocked because Emma is very careful, but how could she lose it? We searched the whole fast food shop but still couldn't find it.

A few minutes later, a man rushed up to us, holding our flag bags. "A thief stole the flag bags, and I chased him down. I finally got your flag bags," he said exhaustedly. Emma thanked the nice man. We went to the charity center and returned the flag bags to the charity. I felt over the moon.

How about you, Jess? How was your scout camping trip?

I hope to hear from you soon.

Best,

James

Hi Jess,

How are you? How is everything going? I have something to share with you. Last Sunday, I was doing meaningful things, such as selling flags on the street. My first flag was bought by a man, and I thought he was loving and kind.

When I sold all the flags, my stomach started making some sounds. I was starving. Therefore, Emma and I went to the fast food shop. We put the flag bags on the empty seats. We both ordered combo meals. Each combo meal included a burger, French fries, and a cup of cola. The French fries, tasty crisps, and burgers were delicious.

Then, I finished my meal very quickly. I noticed our flag bags were not on the seats. I screamed, "Oh no! The flag bags are missing!" Emma and I looked around the fast food shop; however, we did not find them.

In the end, we looked everywhere but still could not find the flag bags. We were ashamed of ourselves. From this experience, Emma and I learned that we should pay attention to our things.

I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Yours,
James

Hi Jess,

How have you been? Yesterday, my friend Emma and I became volunteers and sold flags for charity. We went to a bus stop because there were a lot of people. Then, a man put a ten-dollar coin into the flag bag, and I was very thankful to him.

After working for a long time, we felt hungry. We chose a fast food shop because we only had a fifteen-minute break. This fast food shop was very famous, and people who had tried their food before thought it was delicious. I ordered a hamburger and a bottle of cola; they were tasty. The flag bags were next to me.

Suddenly, I realized that the flag bags were missing. We were shocked because if we lost them, the person in charge would scold us. In the end, we called 999, and they said they would try to find the flag bags.

Best,

James

Hi Jess,

How are you?

I am writing to tell you that my friend Emma and I sold flags for charity yesterday morning. However, something happened, and I would like to share it with you.

Yesterday, Emma and I were invited to volunteer to sell flags on Yuen Wo Road. We sold flags from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and around 30 people donated money.

Later, we went to a fast food shop and had a yummy lunch. We put down the flag bags, but after a while, they disappeared. Therefore, we reported it to the policeman quickly.

After an hour, the policeman caught the thief and returned the flag bags to us. We were lucky that we could get our flag bags back.

How about you? Do you have any stories to tell me? I am looking forward to hearing from you soon.

Best,

James

Hi Jess,

Yesterday morning, I sold flags with Emma. When we were volunteering, a lot of people passed by on this street. However, only a few people wanted to buy flags.

When it was time for lunch, we went to the fast food shop to eat. We bought French fries, burgers, and colas. We felt that the food was delicious.

After a while, we were shocked because our flag bags were gone. Emma searched around, and we were worried, so we rushed to look for the flag bags.

In the end, a person on the street asked loudly, "Whose flag bags are these?" We hurried over to the person. Fortunately, the kind person returned our flag bags.

Otherwise, we could have lost them.

Best,

James

Hi Jess,

How are you? What have you been up to lately? Yesterday morning, Emma and I volunteered to sell flags. This charity work will donate some money to homeless people in Hong Kong. When it was 1 p.m., we felt a bit tired and hungry, so we went to Yummy Fast Food Shop to have lunch. We put our flag bags on the chair and ordered a hamburger, French fries, and some soft drinks. They were delicious.

Suddenly, our flag bags were missing. We felt worried about it because we needed to return the flag bags to the charity center in order to donate the money. "The flag bags are not under the table," Emma said. "I just went to the lost and found, but there were no flag bags," I reported.

Soon, a family came and gave the flag bags back to us. They said, "I saw you searching for the flag bags; I'm sorry that I took your flag bags because we wanted to sit here. We have already donated money into the bag." "Thank you!" we said. In the end, we learned that we needed to look after our things carefully.

Best,

James

Hi Jess,

How are you? Since my sister and I participated in volunteer activities, we sold flags on the street last Sunday.

First, we sold flags on the street. Lots of people contributed money. The person who left a deep impression on me was a man who was tall and gentle; he put a hundred dollars into my bag! I thought he was the most compassionate person I had ever seen!

Then, we went to the fast food shop because we were hungry. We put our flag bags on the chair next to us and ordered two hamburger set meals, which were tasty.

When we finished our meal, we found that the bags were missing. We felt shocked because there was a lot of money inside them.

In the end, we found them under the chairs, and I felt relieved. Thank goodness for that!

How about you? I hope to hear from you soon.

Best,

James

Hi Jess,

How are you? How has it been with your holiday trip? I sold flags on my holiday, and it was a very meaningful experience.

On that day, we volunteered to sell flags. My friend Emma also decided to volunteer to sell flags. It was a warm day, a very windy day. We sold flags for about three hours. We were tired, so we decided to take a rest at a local fast food restaurant. When we went there, we ordered two hamburgers and fries, and they were delicious!

We placed our flag bags next to us before we ate. After a while, we realized that our flag bags had disappeared. We were flabbergasted. We searched around us quickly.

In the end, we found the flag bags beneath our tables. We learned to take care of what we currently possess.

Cheers,

James

Hi Jess,

How are you? Last Sunday was a meaningful day because I was selling flags for charity. However, I want to share how I got into trouble.

My best friend Emma and I attended this charity event, selling flags to people on the street. After selling flags for an hour, we felt tired, so we decided to rest and have lunch.

We went to a fast food shop, and the food was delicious. While chatting over lunch, we placed the flag bags beside our chairs. After a while, when we looked at the chairs next to us, we noticed that the flag bags had disappeared. We realized that we had lost them and felt anxious, shocked, and panicked. We were also worried about getting into trouble, thinking the charity might report this to our school if we didn't return the bags on time.

Luckily, Emma found them under our table in the end, and we felt relieved. From this experience, we learned to take better care of our belongings. How about you, Jess? Please reply and let me know what you've been up to lately.

Yours,

James

Hi Jess,

How are you? Yesterday morning, my friend Emma and I joined the charity club. We went out on the street to sell flags.

In the afternoon, we went to a fast food shop to have lunch. The food was tasty, and I could feel it going to my stomach. We ate for nearly 30 minutes. When we decided to finish our tasks, I found that my flag bag was missing. "What's wrong, James?" Emma asked me. I thought that someone had stolen mine, so my face turned pale as I looked around. Emma listened to me and helped me search the floor.

In the end, she found it under the desk. She said that I had dropped the flag bag on the floor. Do you have similar experiences?

I hope you can share them with me.

Best wishes,

James

Hi Jess,

How have you been? Yesterday, Emma and I volunteered. We sold flags for charity. I sold twenty flags. Emma is good at getting along with people, so she sold fifty flags in the morning.

After finishing the volunteer job, we ran to the fast food shop called 'Delicious ABC Fast Food Shop' to have lunch. I ordered a hamburger and a cup of cola. Emma ordered medium French fries, an apple pie, and a cup of Sprite. The food was very delicious.

When we finished lunch, we couldn't find the flag bags. 'Oh! No!' we exclaimed in unison. It shocked us.

Finally, we rushed to the police station and asked the police for help. The police answered, 'You are lucky, we just caught the thief who had two flag bags.' We couldn't believe that we could get the flag bags back again.

We were very joyful after we returned the flag bags. I am looking forward to your reply.

Best wishes,

James

Hi Jess,

Yesterday morning, Emma and I volunteered to sell flags for charity. It was a fun experience! We set up our table in the park and talked to many people. They loved our colorful flags, and we felt great helping others.

After our sale, we went to a nearby fast food restaurant and grabbed some food. We were enjoying how delicious it tasted.

However, after we finished eating, we realized that the bag we asked people to put money in was lost, but it was actually under the table.

It was such a wonderful experience; I hope we can go together again next year.

How about you, James? How was your holiday?

Best,

James

The charity staff told us, "Your flag bags have already been collected because we saw how hard you both worked. I just wanted you to get some rest. You two can go home now!" We thanked the charity staff and went home happily.

Looking forward to hearing from you soon.

Best,

James
